Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the module, students should be able to:

2. summarise and review research on academic writing,
3. plan and produce logically and carefully structured and stylistically effective scholarly texts in English,
4. formulate and present constructive feedback on texts written by others, and
5. use an academic referencing system.

Content

The course is focused on academic writing in English in different academic contexts. Throughout the course, students produce academic text types such as literature reviews, summaries, and article abstracts. In all kinds of text production, students practise using a given referencing system correctly for in-text citations and reference lists. Students also read research on scholarly writing and use it as material for discussion and reflection concerning academic text production. Active reading skills are emphasised and practised, with the purpose to identify the different parts of the academic text and the way in which they are interrelated.

Instruction is in the form of lectures and seminars. Students read and examine each other's work in preparation for seminars. Throughout the course, students produce a number of academic texts of different lengths and submit them in portfolio form. The portfolio and an oral presentation constitute the basis for assessment.
