Content

The aim of the course is to introduce the distinguishing character of History of Ideas while providing methodological tools to read and interpret texts in the field as a basis and preparation for an independent project. The module has two main themes. The first one concerns the special conditions of History of Ideas, its traditional identity and recent applications, different views on its emergence and development and theoretical problems associated with research in the field. The second theme comprises a study of some current interpretation theories and a survey of collection and analysis methods in the field, including source criticism, information retrieval, and the handling of archived material.

Instruction is in the form of lectures, presenting overviews of essential content, and mandatory seminars in which students discuss their understanding of course content in the light of course literature, orally and in writing.

Examination

Learning outcomes 1, 2, 3, and 6 are assessed based on active participation in seminars.

Learning outcomes 4 and 5 are also assessed based on an individual written assignment.

The examiner may decide that a student who is very close to a passing grade can complete a supplementary assignment to receive a passing grade for a specific examination. If this is a possibility, the students must be informed in writing no later than the start of the course, and the examiner must specify when and how such a supplementary assignment may be permitted.
