Content and Form of Instruction

The course includes a description of the linguistic structures of Swedish with emphasis on components that tends to cause problems for learners of Swedish as a second language. Some grammatical phenomena are studied more intensively. In the module some important grammatical phenomena, such as cohesion, the use of tense and word order, are discussed from a discourse point of view. Furthermore, different types of speech acts are analysed as well as cultural differences in the construction of text.

Instruction is in the form of lectures, group exercises, seminars, oral and written assignments (individually and in groups).
