Learning Outcomes

Knowledge and understanding

Upon completion of the course, students should be able to:

- give an account of an ecological perspective on children's development and discuss the interaction between children and the environment,
- give an account of and identify similarities and differences in adopting a care perspective or actor perspective on children in child protection reports and custody investigations,
- give an account of different ways of communicating with children and young people,
- give an account of the child rights perspective and its regulation in Swedish and international legislation.

Competence and skills

Upon completion of the course, students should be able to:

- apply different theoretical perspectives on legislation of relevance to child protection in the social services,
- independently conduct and analyse conversations with children and young people.

Judgement and approach

Upon completion of the course, students should be able to:

- identify and problematise their own professional approach in investigative and informative conversations with children,
- identify and assess short-term and long-term protection needs in children and young people and ensure their participation and their say in the exercise of authority and in the execution of decision.

Content

The course comprises the following components:

- Techniques for interviewing children and young people.
- Legal relationships in the family and society in Swedish and international law from a child rights perspective, with an emphasis on the central concepts of children's rights in the traditional legal areas where such issues are raised. A key aspect is the problematisation and deepened understanding of what is in the best interest of the child, the child's right to be heard, and the wishes of the child.
- Balancing between the responsibility for the child' s care and welfare and between society and family as well as the child's influence on the situation.
- The care and actor perspectives on children and family support-oriented social services or the child protection social services are problematised.
