should also be analysed here. Any effect of joint courses should be commented on.

Overall, the feedback appears to show that the readings and assignments were quite challenging, and it was felt that the content could be stretched across two courses. The issues raised will be taken into account for the next offering.

Suggestions for changes to the next course date.

The suggestion is to:

- (a) reduce the teaching sessions from 7 to 5 3-hour meetings,
- (b) reduce the topics covered, and the number of readings, and
- (c) revise the assignments, to better support students at the start of the assignments.

1. Number of first registrations for a course: First registration = the first time a student registers for a specific course.
