The Net Promoter Score (NPS) is a metric that measures student experience and predicts the effectiveness of a course. It calculates an NPS score based on a key question using a 0-10 scale, asking how likely students would recommend the course to others. Respondents are grouped into Promoters, Passives, or Detractors based on their score, and the NPS is calculated by subtracting the percentage of Detractors from the percentage of Promoters. The NPS is a core metric for course evaluation programs and is trusted by educational institutions to engage their students and improve their learning experience performance.

Comments

Course supervisor's comments

The practical assignments in the course have been revised since last year, and the students have well-received the changes. The workload has decreased significantly, which is a positive development. However, since no final written exam exists, students tend to find the lectures redundant. This is magnified because most students only focus on practical assignments and don't complete any reading or final seminar work. To address this issue, the course plan has been revised for next year to increase student engagement in the theoretical components of the course.
