should also be analysed here. Any effect of joint courses should be commented on.

This course is a course where students from different countries participate and with varied backgrounds. Advantages therefore with this course is that different perspectives on leadership and personality, also from different national and cultural contexts, can be discussed from the point of students personal experiences. The varied backgrounds can sometimes also lead to challenges in different expectations of the course content and structure.

Suggestions for changes to the next course date.

Gender perspectives can be further emphasized.
