should also be analysed here. Any effect of joint courses should be commented on.

Except for a few minor administrative hiccups (covered in the comments and suggestions section above), the course ran smoothly and according to plan throughout and there's no urgent need for changes to its current content and structure. That said, a majority of students can and need to crank up the effort and double the time (see graph for answers to question 3) they put into their language learning between classes and submission deadlines (see suggested changes below) for both the course and its participants to achieve their full potential.

Suggestions for changes to the next course date.

From Autumn 2017 onwards, the following will be added to the course (within the parameters of the current syllabus to begin with):

- a pre-recorded motivational speech or text (with examples drawn from the ample supply of optional but recommended learning resources and materials linked to or provided during the course) to help convince / remind students about the rewards of i) aiming higher than the minimum course requirements with their coursework/performance (in terms of both quality and quantity) and ii) forming autonomous learning habits that can be maintained and developed whenever there's no scheduled interaction with the instructor and fellow students and after the course is completed, and
- a system where students not only keep track of their own work and progress but also reflect on their own learning and share learning experiences through a folder in Itslearning where they'll be asked to post or link to learning journal / audio diary / vlog entries or similar at regular intervals for the instructor(s) to read or tune into at least twice while the course is still in progress (given the personal nature of this task, peer-to-peer and third-party sharing will be completely optional).

1. Number of first registrations for a course: First registration = the first time a student registers for a specific course.
