Results of learning

All in all, the course was valuable for me.

Courses that were considered valuable were related to personal development, acquisition of new knowledge and skills, understanding of something. Higher ratings can refer to students' perceived development (learned a lot, and it was useful). Lower ratings can refer to scanty development of knowledge and skills or not understanding certain themes or their parts, not understanding the necessity and significance of the course, problems in the learning environment.

How likely would you be to recommend this course to a friend or colleague?

Net Promoter Score (NPS) = 66.7

Promoters = 4 (66.7%)

Passives = 2 (33.3%)

Detractors = 0 (0%)

The Net Promoter Score (NPS) is a metric that measures student experience and predicts the effectiveness of a course. It calculates an NPS score based on a key question using a 0-10 scale, asking how likely students would recommend the course to others. Respondents are grouped into Promoters, Passives, or Detractors based on their score, and the NPS is calculated by subtracting the percentage of Detractors from the percentage of Promoters. The NPS is a core metric for course evaluation programs and is trusted by educational institutions to engage their students and improve their learning experience performance.

Course supervisor's comments

6 out of 15 registered/active students have participated in the course evaluation, amounting to a 40% answer frequency.

The course is evaluated as valuable, especially based on its character as an introductory course of the Master's program in Geomedia Studies.

Based on the data delivered via the course evaluation and discussions with the students, it appears that they are generally satisfied with the course, albeit somewhat challenged by the amount of readings they need to cover. They also appreciated the opportunities for discussion and the variety of teaching formats.

Based on the above reflections, there is not urgent need for radical changes in the course's structure or content; however, the course convenor, together with the participating teachers, will discuss possibilities about making strategic changes on the amount of literature (always in line with the course plan and learning outcomes).
