- B) Professional and accommodating

- D) Deficient

should also be analysed here. Any effect of joint courses should be commented on.

Difficult to draw conclusions on just one respondent. However, the response from the students in the course (as well as the one respondent here) is positive to the course, course load, textbook, lecturing, examform, etc. Have been so for the years that I have had the course. Now it will be a change in the lecturing-staff. At the moment, no immediate needs for changes in the course but always a need to update lecture-handouts with the development of international political reality affecting macroeconomics and its applications. A need also to evaluate if the book is the most suited text (it is a good text for this type of course but perhaps little too much USA-oriented in some sections).

Suggestions for changes to the next course date.

Perhaps evaluate a new textbook with more focus on European matters (?).
