Summary of student evaluations based on the questionnaire, free text comments and any other data.

We had only one respondent. This one was quite disappointed ("dated courses") and suggests "new blood" (i.e., new teachers).

The programme coordinator's final analysis.

The single response does not reflect many other student's expressed views in courses - also ongoing students. But the comment this time highlights the importance of explaining why foundational literature is used to some extent in year one (we had no active student in year 2 this academic year) rather than the latest literature. In the same time we must continue updating topics and names of courses. Recruiting staff and the pandemic has temporarily halted the efforts that began in 2019. Year 2 consists of courses designed by student and teachers together why datedness should not be experienced.

Suggestions for improvements.

Highlight turning points in the academic discourse (as relevant for each course). Resume updating topics and names of courses where this has been postponed during the pandemic.

² Number of students who have not clicked "No" - "I am not a student on the programme stated above this academic year" in the evaluation.
